

Lore

The books
that made you.

Reading becomes part of you.

A book ends.

Its world stays.

Lore is a social reading project built around the people, ideas and feelings books leave behind.

The identity gives that reading life a home: literary, personal and open to conversation.

A home for your reading life.

01

Reader-first

Personal shelves, reading identity
and the books that shape us.

02

Community-led

Conversations, shared discoveries and meaningful reader connections.

03

Authors within reach

Space for the creative voices
behind the books we love.

Literary. Human. Independent.

Literary

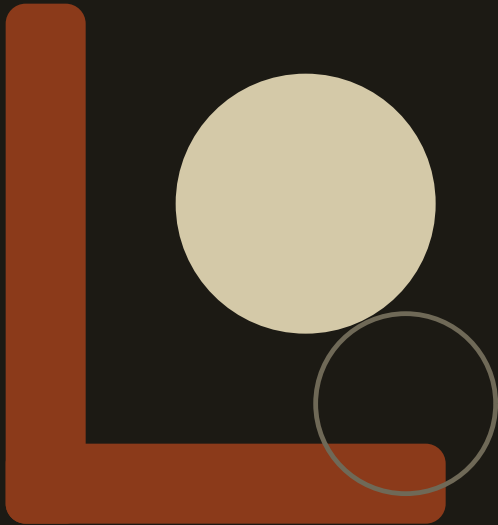

An editorial rhythm with room to pause.

Human

Specific feelings and real conversations.

Independent

A distinctive voice and a reader-led ambition.

A book. A reader. An author.

The rust L is the book's architecture:
its spine, its base and Lore's initial.

The filled circle represents the reader
inhabiting the open space of the page.

The smaller, open circle represents the author:
connected to the book and its foundations.

One signature. Different scales.

PRIMARY HORIZONTAL LOCKUP

APP ICON

The colours of a lived-in library.

Inkwell	Shadow Fern	Olive	Dried Rust	Aged Paper	Bone
#1C1A14	#2A2E1E	#483E25	#8B3A1A	#D4C9A8	#EDE8DC

One identity. Three expressions.

ARCHIVE

Your reading life.

Product & long-form content

ELECTRIC

What did reading
make you?

Launch & social campaigns

WARM EDITORIAL

Reading,
together.

Author & seasonal stories

Editorial voice. Digital clarity.

Aa

The books that made you.

Cormorant Garamond · headlines & wordmark

A place for the worlds you carry.

Space Grotesk · interface & supporting text

READER PORTRAIT / 001 / CHANGED-ME

IBM Plex Mono · labels, tags & editorial details

A quiet system with a clear rhythm.

01 / Rules

Fine lines structure content like notes in an archive.

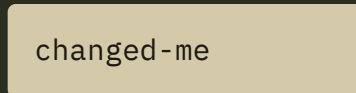

02 / Circles

Filled and open forms echo the reader–author relationship.

03 / Tags

Small labels make personal reading identities visible.

Generous margins. Clear hierarchy. One focal point per composition.

Speak to the reader inside the person.

*“What did reading
make you?”*

Warm, direct and emotionally specific.
Ask questions people want to answer.
Make room for individual interpretation.

SAMPLE BRAND LANGUAGE

The books that made you.
Your reading life.
Reading, together.

A feed with a recognisable point of view.

READER PORTRAIT / 001

Three books.
Three tags.
One reading life.

Lore

COMMUNITY THREAD

What did
reading
make you?

Lore

SHELF TAG / 004

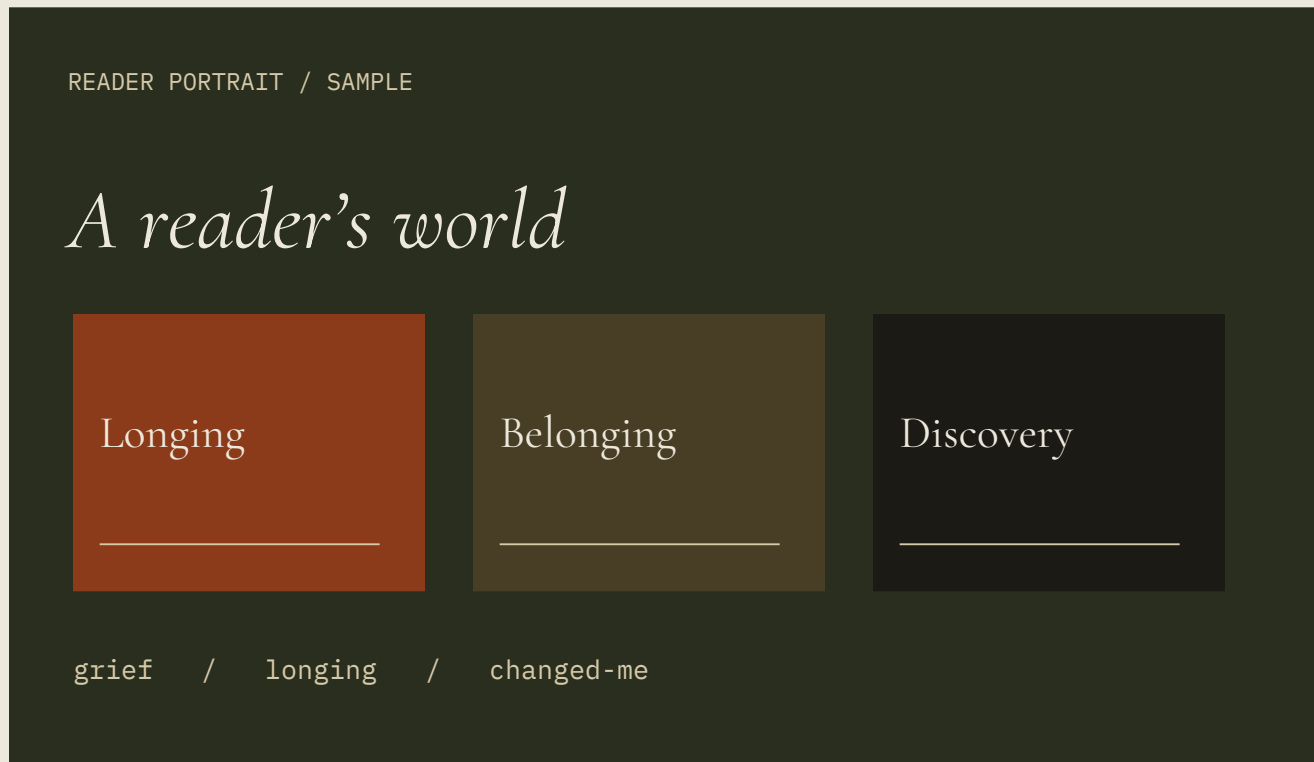

#changed-me

Books that rewrote
something in you.

Lore

A reading identity you can share.

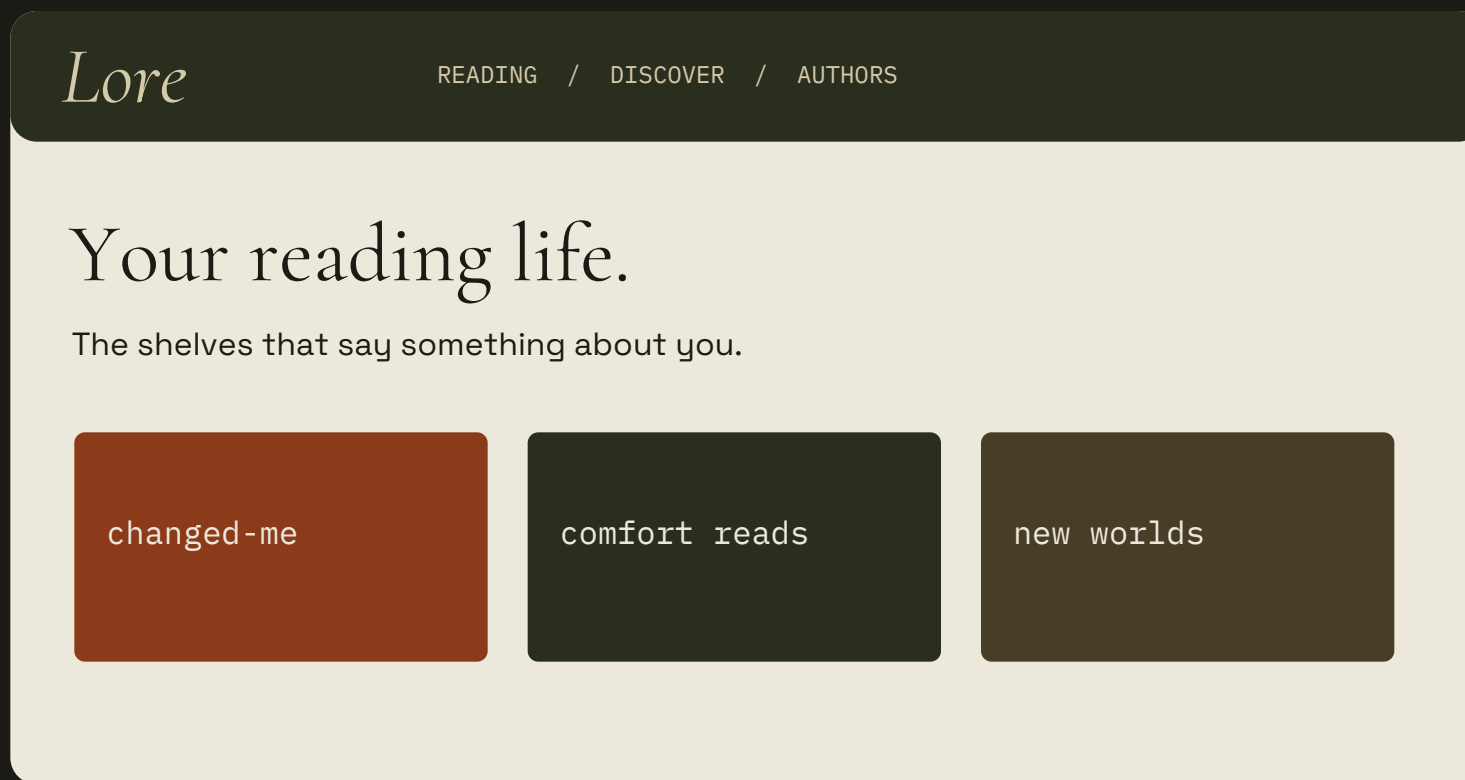

The portrait format

Three books. Three tags. One sentence.

A repeatable editorial format that turns individual reading taste into a shared story.

Use book imagery with permission and invite readers to approve their portraits.

The identity, imagined in product.

Concept interface

Archive anchors the experience.
The serif brings warmth; simple labels
and structured cards keep it clear.

Illustrative design application.
Features shown are proposed.

Consistency makes it recognisable.

- 01 Preserve the mark

Keep the L, circle positions and proportions intact.
Use the supplied light and dark colour treatments.
- 02 Choose a mode

Archive for the core identity; Electric for campaign energy;
Warm Editorial for personal and seasonal stories.
- 03 Give it space

Keep text and imagery clear of the logo.
Use a proposed minimum clear space of one reader-circle diameter.
- 04 Keep it readable

Use high-contrast text pairings. Test small-size logo legibility and interface contrast before production.

The books that made you.

A literary identity for a shared reading life.

LORE / @MADE.BYLORE

Visual identity proposal · October 2026

